Neural architectures able to generate variable-length outputs are extremely effective for applications like Machine Translation and Image Captioning. In this pap