We consider the problem of providing dense segmentation masks for object discovery in videos. We formulate the object discovery problem as foreground moti